What is SHIRP?

SHIRP is an online library of health and medical resources. SHIRP operates as a program of the University Library at the University of Saskatchewan, and offers access to a subset of the University Library's electronic health sciences collection for the benefit of licensed health care practitioners in Saskatchewan. Access is free.

Why should I use SHIRP?

To get access to full text articles, clinical videos and images, e-books, point of care tools and more.

To get information to give to patients on conditions, treatments, and medications.

What services are offered?

Article Requests

If the full text article you want is not available in the SHIRP collection, you can request it using the online form from the SHIRP website. There is no charge for this service, and articles are usually sent via email within 1-2 days from the Leslie & Irene Dubé Health Sciences Library.

Training

The SHIRP Librarian can provide orientation to health care practitioners by telephone, online or in person for resources on the SHIRP website. SHIRP also displays at a number of health conferences in Saskatchewan throughout the year.

Contact info@shirp.ca for more information.

How do I get access to SHIRP?

From a health care facility: If you are using a computer in a health care facility anywhere in the province you can access resources directly from the SHIRP website. A password is not required.

SHR, RQHR, PAPHR: If you are employed by Saskatoon, Regina Qu'Appelle or Prince Albert Parkland Health Regions, you can access SHIRP resources through those health region library websites.

From a health organization: If you work in any of the following health organizations, you can access resources directly from the SHIRP website. A password is not required.

- Saskatchewan Cancer Agency
- eHealth Saskatchewan
- Ministry of Health
- Health Quality Council
- Northern Intertribal Health Authority

From offsite (private practice, home): If you work in private practice or wish to access resources from home, a username and password is required. You can request your own username and password from the SHIRP office using the online request form on the SHIRP website. Click "create an account" under the user login area to launch the online form. License or registration number is required on the form. When your account is approved by the SHIRP office, you will be able use your username and password to log into the SHIRP website and access the resources.
